Jerry Englerth (aka Jerry Engler). Born March 31st, 1936, left this world on June 24th, 2020. He was a Father, a Son, an Uncle, a Great Friend, a Confident, a Mentor, an Advisor, and even a Second Father to many.

As a talented young musician, songwriter, singer, and guitarist, he had his brush of fame in the budding years of Rock n Roll with a single that actually got some airplay in the late 50's. It was called Sputnik, a song Jerry wrote in 1957 when he was 21 and recorded with the 4 Ekkos; a song for which, even today, he is known and celebrated internationally as an icon of the Rockabilly Era of Rock n Roll!

Jerry got to meet and share the stage with many talents of the 50's: Sam Cooke, Little Anthony & The Imperials, Fats Domino, Chuck Berry, and so many more. But, the name he spoke of most fondly was that of Buddy Holly, for not only did they play in the same venues, Buddy invited Jerry to his studio in Clovis, NM, to do some recording work together. So, on September 7, 1958, Buddy helped arrange, record, and even play tubular bells and lead guitar on another Engler song called "What A Gonna Do?" which had a limited release in 1992 with a remastered version of Sputnik.

A family calling cut short his promising career in the music entertainment world, but he never regretted dedicating his life to being a family man. He would go on to achieve management level positions with both Kodak and Xerox until untimely health issues cut short his promising corporate career, as well.

He forever remained a Songwriter and started collecting Guitars, then built a home Studio, where he put all that he had learned about Sound Mixing and Production to good use; producing several CD's on his own creation.

He was the consummate Public Entertainer, a Philosopher, a Local Musician and Songwriter Advocate and Promoter, an Avid Reader, and an Audio and Video-phile. One of his crowning achievements was the formation of The Songwriter's Advocate (TSA) group, which Jerry founded. It served as a vehicle for regional songwriters and musicians to meet up and help each other hone their craft; encouraging them to continue their respective growth, record their music, and promote it to the public-at-large. Many local musicians benefited from that organization and each of them realized some success as a result of it.

Many Rochesterians will remember "Morning Break" on WOKR TV with Don

Alhart. Well, there was an open invitation competition to write a theme song for the show and Jerry had the winning theme! That theme song was heard by thousands every day for years!

His presence, along with his booming voice, would fill any room he entered, and his loud laugh could shake the walls! He was Passionate and Outspoken in his Beliefs, Opinions, and on Topics he was vastly Knowledgeable in. He was not a shallow person, not one to be fake. The man he showed you was the man he was. Period.

He leaves behind many who respected him, remember him fondly, and still love him dearly. He will be missed.

Play on, Jerry, play on!

“ I used to live with Jerry and the Englerth family during 1944-45 before they moved to AZ. His brother Dick used to play the drums. The last time I saw Jerry was at his sister Lenora's funeral Mass. We had a nice chat and had hopes of getting together in the future. Unfortunately that didn't happen which should remind us all don't put off what you hoped to do because you may not get another chance.

To the family he loved so much I wish to express my deepest sympathy and please know he will be forever mentioned along with his family in my daily prayers. God Bless You All.

“ What memories this brings back! In the 1970s, Jerry and Phil Gross (both from Kodak) founded a group with the acronym RASCAL (Rochester Area Songwriters/Composers Assistance League), formed to help people produce demos, etc., to promote their music. They found some of their original members through a listing of winners in an ASCAP song writing contest, including myself. We would get together and help each other put our songs to music, each person contributing their own particular talent. I worked on a couple of songs with him. Jerry was an accomplished musician with a wonderful voice. I was impressed when I learned of his past credentials. He was an original Rockabilly, through and through, and that influence stayed in his music even 20 years later. I remember he referred to himself as the 'Chairman of the Bored' (LOL) at our group meetings. I am so sorry to hear of his passing, but his music will live on. I have a CD of some of our old recordings, and every now and then, I give it a listen. RIP to a great guy.
