“ I DETEST the word "was" being used in a description of my cousin, Jordy. To me, he will always be an 'is'.

We were both raised in the same neighborhood as kids; we were both named after the same person, my grandfather/Jordy's great grandfather Joseph, as is customary in the Jewish religion to keep the name alive. His grandmother, Lilly, and my mother Pearl were sisters.

As is was in many Jewish families of that time period, siblings lived very close to each other in neighborhoods. My mother and her three sisters [Bella, Lilly, Shiffie] all lived near each other always. So, we had many oppoportunies to gather as a family. It was essential and expected for all those sisters, and their children to gather as a family each and every Friday evening. That was a weekly family gathering where all the children saw each other.

I saw Jordy alot as we were growing up, and stayed close throughout our lives. Of course, it was never enough time together, and he will be sorely missed. He was someone of extraordinary intelligence, passion, with a great sense of humor. I mean---look at that smile! How can ANYONE not love that punim. His girls and Abby were extremely lucky to have him in their lives and be in receipt of his gifts everyday.

Gonna miss you.

“ Dear Abbey, Rachel and Morgan,
Jordon was my cousin and childhood friend and day camp buddy in our Brooklyn years. I was happy to reconnect with him some time ago and to hear of the wonderful, loving family you shared. He was so proud of you all and wrote so lovingly about you. I was impressed by the devotion and selflessness he gave your community. My grandfather Charles Danoff, Jordon's great-uncle, suffered and passed as well from Parkinsons. We know how difficult that is to endure and hope that Jordon is now at peace.

Jordon was my closest friend from the age of 15. We shared so many great times filled with laughter, sports, and just the everyday of those tough teenage years helping each other grow up . Jordon was my go to guy and I think sometimes I was his as well. A better person, I really can't name one. I know how happy he was with your beautiful family. Although I will miss our chats I know he's always going to remain a part of my life and yours. I wish you and your girls love and peace.
