“ Tiffany and Kristen, I happened to sign into Bean’s to see my friend’s dad obit and I came across this. Sending you and your families my love and prayers. I have so many memories of your dad (and mom) coming over to my house to visit my dad. I can still hear our dads chatting and greeting one another as “Brother.”

“ I met Judy right after St pius Church burned down. We were introduced and she asked if I could help sew baptismal bibs with her as she was so far behind. That began our weekly meeting and different kinds of crafting. I had never attempted jewelry making before, but she taught me that. I also learned how to make rosaries from her and I’ve made many of them. This lady took any tasks she could and had a craft room full of ideas . She loved to sew and especially quilt things. When her hands got to a point that she couldn’t cut the fabric out, I would cut out the pieces and help her sew them together. It makes me smile to think of all the times I had to thread her sewing machine needle for her. Judy’s legacy lives on . Thank you for teaching me how to do all those things. You are finally at peace.

“ Judy and I met through our St. Pius Tenth Folk Group where we sang descant together. We had a lot of fun singing, playing guitar and praying together. She was a great inspiration to me and she taught my daughter, a rosary group at school, and myself how to make metal rosaries. I always enjoyed talking with Judy and Bob and am so glad they can once more be together with no more pain and suffering. My condolences to all of you.

“ When I was a young college student attending daily mass at St. Pius, Judy and I became friends. She quickly became a spiritual mentor to me and we spent many afternoons at Leaf and Bean chatting about life and faith. She taught me how to make metal rosaries and I will always think of her when I'm making or repairing rosaries for others. May her soul rest in peace.

“ Judy and I became friends when our son Larry married her daughter, Tiffany. We shared many things in common, our kids and grandkids, our love of crafting and our religious beliefs. She will be missed, but glad she is finally free from that physical and mental prison her illness held her in..
