“ I first met Rosemary through her sister Rita, and nephew Scott. As I was a friend of theirs, I heard many a wonderful story about her, and how important she was to them. I was delighted to meet her on a couple of trips she made out West when she could still travel and get to visit them. Rita and Scott treasured the painted holiday ceramics Rosemary made for them, especially the colorful Christmas Tree which we all got to admire during the season. She would also send Rita special hot dogs from a local manufacturer for Rita, for a taste of “home” sometimes. I would hear how when Rosemary came to visit, she would work from dawn to dusk helping Rita around the home, cleaning gutters, doing yardwork, cleaning windows, etc. when she wasn't out having fun with them. I heard about her fishing with Rita's husband Kirk when he was still with us, and much, much more. I had much admiration for Rosemary, her spunk, joy for life, and kindness to all (a family trait it would seem).

Some time after getting to know her, and Rita always telling Rosemary what was going on out west, I started receiving holiday and birthday cards from Rosemary, and her best friend Beth (and Olivia). When I had a couple major surgeries, they would send get well cards, or thinking of you cards. These always brought joy to my life, and encouragement when sometimes life could be trying. During those times, I began calling Rosemary on a fairly regular basis, and got to know her better as well. I heard about what a wonderful friend Beth was to her, and how they loved volunteering at the church, attending services, going shopping and out to meals together and more. I also got to hear about how wonderful her nieces and nephews were, inviting them to holiday dinners and helping with other tasks. We would talk football sometimes as her favorite NFL team was the Packers, and was my second favorite team, as my family originates from Wisconsin. I thoroughly enjoyed talking with her, and keeping up on the news, and was so grateful that her sister Rita was able to come home and be with her for awhile before her passing. Rosemary was also grateful for that time together, and that Rita's friend Dan made that all possible and more.

Rosemary, like Rita and Scott, became part of my extended family, I am grateful for getting to know her, enjoy conversations, and for the time I spent with her, even across the country via the phone. I am also grateful that she had such a wonderful friend Beth (and Olivia), and family in her life to make it so much more special.
